

WHERE IS THE WATER?

Blended Intensive Program (BIP) | Budapest Metropolitan

University (METU)

Join us for an innovative international experience exploring the relationship between water systems and urban environments through art and ecology!

This is Year 3 of #twoistdaswasser, a research project started in Berlin, continued in Vienna, and now arriving in Budapest!

Schedule:

2 May 2025 - online workshop
5-10 May 2025 - workshops in Budapest

Project description:

The project invites participants to delve into the dynamic interplay between water systems and urban environments through the lens of ecology and art as a research field. By bridging these disciplines, the project fosters a deeper understanding of how water shapes urban spaces and vice versa. This initiative builds upon prior phases of the #twoistdaswasser research project, which started in Berlin and later expanded to Vienna, now entering its third year with a focus on Budapest.

Methods and outcomes:

The project will take the form of an art research seminar that integrates methodologies from textile design, media, and film. Employing collaborative and interdisciplinary tools, the seminar encourages participants to explore innovative approaches to understanding and representing urban water systems.

The culmination of the project will be an interactive installation that engages directly with the city of Budapest and its water systems. This installation will not only showcase the outcomes of the research but also serve as a foundation for a broader traveling art and science initiative. By connecting with diverse audiences, the project aspires to expand its impact and continue the discourse on the interconnections between water, ecology, and urban environments.
